Learning Outcomes

Knowledge and Understanding

At the end of the course the student is expected to

- demonstrate increased insight of the literary genre, the socio-political context, the contemporary religious world, and the structure and theology of the Book of Revelation, and
- demonstrate knowledge of the history of interpretation of the Book of Revelation.

Competence and skills

At the end of the course the student is expected to

- demonstrate advanced skills in reading and interpreting the Book of Revelation (including translation and analysis of the Greek text), including Jewish and early Christian apocalyptic literature, and
- demonstrate competence in evaluating interpretations of the Book of Revelation from different traditions.

Judgement and approach

At the end of the course the student is expected to

- demonstrate a hermeneutical awareness of the challenges involved in the task of reading and interpreting the Book of Revelation for today's church and society.

Course Content and Course Work

The Book of Revelation has a long and complex history of interpretation. How has this book been read and interpreted in the history of the church? How does this effect our reading today? Apart from these questions, the course will treat the socio-political setting of John the prophet and introduce the world of Jewish and early Christian apocalyptic literature. In particular, the course will focus on the theology of the Book of Revelation and on the task of reading, interpreting and explicating the Book of Revelation in the 21th century. The seminar will encourage and train students to use and develop their Greek skills in reading and translating the Book of Revelation.

Assessment Forms

PM: Theological essay on a central theme in the Book of Revelation, 3500 words. (4,5 credits)

Text Seminar: Translation and text analysis. (2 credits)

* PM: Report and evaluation of text and commentary discussion, 700 words. (1 credit)

* is used to mark assessment forms where only a two graded scale is used (pass or fail). If the student has a decision from ALT regarding pedagogical support due to disability, the course coordinator has the right to provide a customized assessment.
