Learning outcomes

Knowledge and understanding

At the end of the course the student is expected to

- demonstrate increased insight of the literary genre, the socio-political context, the contemporary religious world, and the structure and theology of the Book of Revelation, and
- demonstrate knowledge of the history of interpretation of the Book of Revelation.

Competence and skills

At the end of the course the student is expected to

- demonstrate advanced skills in reading and interpreting the Book of Revelation (including translation and analysis of the Greek text), including Jewish and early Christian apocalyptic literature, and
- demonstrate competence in evaluating interpretations of the Book of Revelation from different traditions.

Judgement and approach

At the end of the course the student is expected to

- demonstrate a hermeneutical awareness of the challenges involved in the task of reading and interpreting the Book of Revelation for today's church and society.

Course content

The Book of Revelation has a long and complex history of interpretation. How has this book been read and interpreted in the history of the church? How does this effect our reading today? Apart from these questions, the course will treat the socio-political setting of John the prophet and provide an introduction to the world of Jewish and early Christian apocalyptic literature. In particular, the course will focus on the theology of the Book of Revelation and on the task of reading, interpreting and explaining the Book of Revelation in the 21th century. The seminar will encourage and train students to use and develop their Greek skills in reading and translating the Book of Revelation.

Course work

Lectures, literature seminar, and a written paper.

Assessment

Theological essay on a central theme in the Book of Revelation (3 000 – 4 000 words) (4,5hp)

Translation and text-analysis (2hp)

Report and evaluation of text- and commentary discussion (500 – 800 words, 1hp)

Grading Scale

Passed with distinction (VG), Passed (G) or Failed (U).

Course development

At the end of the course, the students are asked to complete a course evaluation. The results are compiled and commented on by the responsible teacher in a report which is available to the student union.

Since the last time the course was given, no changes have been made.
